Tribute of Respect.Russell Loses a Prominent Citizen.

Whereas, it has pleased God in His infinite wisdom to remove from the active walks of life, to that city not made with hands eternal in the heavens, Bro. J. A. Goodman, who had reached his seventy-fourth year, and in all his long life had been an honored citizen, and for nearly fifty years a zealous Mason, who at the time of his death was a member of Columbia Lodge, No. 96, whose death the members deeply deplore and will long cherish his memory, therefore be it

Resolved, That we, as a lodge, tender to the bereaved widow and the surviving son, and grandson, our heartfelt sympathy in their great loss, and command them to God, who alone can bring succor to wounded and bleeding hearts.

2nd. That we sympathize with the religious body who long held Bro. Goodman in the highest esteem for the very effective work he did in this part of Kentucky as a minister of the Gospel.

3rd. That a copy of these resolutions be spread upon the record-book of the lodge, a copy sent to the loved ones of the deceased, and that The Adair County News be asked to publish the same.

4th. That the members of Columbia Lodge, No. 96, wear the usual badge of mourning for thirty days.

Parrot-Mays.

Miss Hazel Beatrice Parrott, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Parrott, of Taylor county, and Mr. E. L. Mays, son of Mr. and Mrs. B. F. Mays, of Casey county, came to Lebanon Friday and after securing license from County Clerk Sam J. Spalding, were married at the Baptist parsonage, Dr. T. J. Porter officiating.—Lebanon Falcon.

The groom is a nephew of Mrs. J. H. Kelley, this place.

We were in error last week when we stated that James and Isham Kearnes, who shot Marcus Richards, were held in the sum of $750 each to await the action of the grand jury. They were held in that amount until the examining trial which was held at Jamestown last Tuesday. There were quite a number of witnesses and at the conclusion they were held in the sum of $1,000 each. They bonded and went home. Marcus Richards, the wounded man, is in a room at the Baptist parsonage, and it is now thought that he will recover.

Haag's circus drew a large crowd last Saturday. A great many parents came to show their children the animals. The old folks did not care for the show, but they wanted the little ones to see the sights.

I have 85 acres, a good ridge farm, that I will sell. On it is a good dwelling. If you are interested write

Fielding J. Coffey, Crocus, Ky.

Born, to the wife of Paul Waggener, Louisville, on the 25th of June, a daughter. Mother and baby doing well.

Less try the curfew law. We believe it would be good for the youth of Columbia.

Circuit court will open next Monday. Sheriff Sanders says he is ready.

Community Chautauqua.

Mr. J. Q. Phelps, who was a very substantial and highly respected citizen of Russell county, died Tuesday night of last week. His home was two and a half miles this side of Jamestown, on the Columbia road. He was a thrifty farmer, and a man who was respected by his neighbors and friends, and whose death cast a gloom over the entire county. He was about sixty-five years old, and had been active in the affairs of Russell county since early manhood. Mr. Phelps lost his wife about eighteen months ago, but he leaves several children.

The funeral and burial took place Wednesday and it was largely attended. He was one of the leading spirits in the neighborhood of Esto, and it will be long time before the residents of that community will see his like. For years he was a friend and supporter of this paper, and to the surviving friends the editor and manager extends their profoundest sympathy, admonishing them to look to the Giver of all that is good in this time of deepest sorrow.

Birthday Dinner.

On June 22, 1919, the children and friends of D. P. Rice met at his home and set him a dinner, it being his seventy-sixth birthday. There was about fifty present. A bountiful dinner was spread and the crowd did justice to it, but there was quite a lot carried back not eaten. Every body enjoyed the occasion fine and wish him many more birthdays.

E. S. Rice.

Youthful Horseshoer.

Mr. Bud Parson, of this place, is a blacksmith, and his oldest son, "Billie," as he is familiarly called, is just eleven years old, but he is a mechanic, spending most of his time about his father's shop. A few days ago a man rode up to the shop, asked for Mr. Parson, saying he wanted a shoe put on his horse. Mr. Parson was absent, but Billie told the gentleman to get down, that he would shoe his horse and so he did. The customer was astounded to see a boy eleven years old shoeing a horse, and in speaking of it he said, "the boy did a good job."

Reduced Price Sale.

Over 100,000 yards at bargain prices. Take advantage of this. Fall goods are going to be much higher. Give me your order at once.

At the recent examination of teachers for Adair county, there were eleven applicants. Nine first-class certificates were issued and they were awarded to Nathan B. Allison, D. E. Sanders, Scott Campbell, Dorothy Gill, Anna Eubank, Ruth Holladay, Ada Neat, Lola Maupin, Mabel Hindman. Of this nine Anna Eubank made the highest grade, an average of 95.3-12. There was one failure and one received a second-class.

We have received a clipping from Sam Nat Hancock, showing that the people of Potales, New Mexico, are expecting unusual activities upon the part of companies at Potales, as it is generally believed to be an oil field. Experts, who have been upon the ground, are confident that oil can be found in paying quantities. Quite a number of Adair county people are living in this part of New Mexico.

The tent meeting which was in progress two weeks, closed last Wednesday night. It was very well attended throughout. The ministers who conducted the services, came to Columbia highly recommended for Christian character, men who were doing great good for the cause of their Master.

Nell Bros., of Gradyville, have forty-five acres set in tobacco, and the plants are growing nicely. Some tobacco patch.

New Firm.

The undersigned have formed a partnership and will conduct a family grocery and implement store in the same stand that has been occupied by C. R. Hutchison for a number of years. Mr. A. D. Patten, who has had experience in this line of business, wants his friends to call at his present location. Mr. Hutchison returns his thanks to the friends who have patronized him since he has been in business, and asks they remain with the firm.

Notice of Election.

In compliance with a proclamation, issued by the Governor of Kentucky, on the 12th, day of May, 1919, Ordering that an Election for Representative in Congress for the Eighth Congressional District of Kentucky, composed of the Counties of Adair, Anderson, Boyle, Casey, Garrard, Jessamine, Lincoln, Madison, Mercer, Shelby and Spencer, be held in each voting precinct in the Counties aforesaid on Saturday August the 2d, 1919.

An election will be held in Adair County on the above mentioned date in the various voting precincts of said County, for the purpose as above stated.

Cortez Sanders,
Sheriff of Adair County Ky.
30-2t.

A large crowd will evidently be in Columbia next Monday, the opening day of the Adair circuit court. Many will come on business, others will come to see and be seen. It matters not as to the mission that will bring them to town, but we want to extend an invitation to one and all who are indebted to this office to call and make payment.

There are a large number of our subscribers in Adair county who have been going on new time for several months, and we need to collect. Do not fail to call and look over your account.

Closing Out Sale.

On July 7th, I will sell, at auction, the balance of the old stock of Russell & Co.

S. Ray Conover.

The signing of the peace treaty was ratified at the Baptist church last Sunday night. The meeting was not generally known and but a fair audience gathered. Speeches were made by Revs. R. V. Bennett, S. G. Shelly and Eld. F. J. Barger. Appropriate songs were rendered by the choir, and the speakers read and quoted Scripture, showing that the Lord was on the side of the allies in the great struggle.

This unusual musical organization is really one of the stellar attractions of the week. Its program runs the whole gamut of music from Jazz to Grand Opera and back again, and its many specialty numbers, solos, duets, trios, quartettes and sextettes in unusual combinations of instruments make its program one of unending novelty and enduring appeal.

Special Notice.

I have sold a half interest in my business and I want all persons owing me to call and settle.

C. R. Hutchison.

Next Monday will be the opening of the Adair circuit court. A great many people will come to Columbia, and we would be glad if those who, know they are indebted to this office, would call and settle.

The whistle of the thresher is now being heard, and thousands of bushels of wheat are being stored in bins. The crop was good throughout the county.

Miss Marshall Paull gave a tacky party last Wednesday evening. Many who attended were on the square, and there were some unique costumes, affording a great deal of levity.

Mr. S. E. Allen, who has been in poor health for sometime, improves very slowly. His many friends would be glad to see him out again.

AT REST.

Mrs. Kate Kemp, Beloved Wife of Geo. A. Kemp, Succumbs at 11:20 Monday Night.

FUNERAL SERVICES AT THE RESIDENCE.

A very sad and lamentable death occurred at the home of Mr. Geo. A. Kemp Monday night at 11:20 o'clock when his beloved wife, Kate Spencer Kemp crossed over to be with loved ones who had gone before. The news of this death brought sorrow to all the homes in Columbia, as the deceased was highly respected throughout the community, and loved by intimates who were acquainted with her noble, Christian character.

The deceased was a daughter of Wm. M. and Mary Ann Gatewood Spencer, and was born and reared in Greensburg. Her mother died when she was quite young, and a few years after the close of the Civil war she and her sisters and her father became residents of Columbia, and here the major portion of her life was spent.

The deceased was born November 7, 1847.

In the winter of 1870 she was happily married to Mr. Geo. A. Kemp and to this union three children were born. The first lived only a few hours, and besides her husband she is survived by a daughter and son, Miss Minnie, who is a well-known teacher, and Henry M., who has been a close attendant upon his mother's affairs for a number of years. She also leaves two sisters, Mrs. Bettie Atkins and Mrs. M. D. Baker, and several nieces and nephews.

Mrs. Kemp spent a beautiful Christian life, and for years she tithe, giving to the Lord a part of all the money that came into her hands, and before she died she devised how a portion of her savings should be expended.

She was a member of the Columbia Presbyterian Church, but on account of her infirmities she was not able to attend services regularly, but was a contributor to all the ordinances of the organization.

At her own request the funeral services will be held at the residence this (Tuesday) afternoon at 4 o'clock and will be conducted by her pastor, Rev. B. T. Watson. The interment will be in the city cemetery.

The principal cause of Mrs. Kemp's demise was paralysis, she having met with two strokes before the final dissolution. One who was with her in her last hours said to the writer, "it was the most painless and beautiful death I ever saw."

All Columbia feels for the surviving members of the family and the other relatives.

To the Trustees of Adair County.

I request that all schools commence July 7th, according to contract. All trustees and patrons co-operate with the teachers in making this one of the best school years ever known in Adair county.

Noah Loy, Superintendent.

If you want an insurance policy in an old established company, the one that nearly all the financiers of Columbia and out in the county are carrying policies in, let J. E. Murrell write it in the Connecticut Mutual, one of the best dividend paying companies doing business. Here is a policy for young men: Take the age of 20, endowment at 65. The applicant would start paying $20.52. He would draw a dividend each year while paying, and if he is living at the age of 65 the company will pay him the full amount in cash for which he is insured. All ages will be written upon this plan up to 50 years. If death occurs before the applicant reaches 65, the whole amount will be paid. Remember that Mr. J. E. Murrell represents a mutual company.

Notice.

I have some good teams for sale.

A. G. Hill, Columbia, Ky.

The main highway leading to Columbia is the Campbellsville pike, and it is said that Adair's end of it, nine miles, is in a very bad condition. This piece of road was given to the county by the Campbellsville and Muldrough's Hill Turnpike Company with the understanding that Adair would keep the nine miles in good condition, and she should do it. Now is the time to put metal on in order that it may become settled and smooth before winter comes. If the county Judge is in charge he should act, and if he is not, whoever is should get busy.

For Sale.

One suit of furniture, a piano, a phonograph, I also have one Jersey cow, several head of pure bred hogs, a lot of pure-bred White Leghorn chickens, one 5 plow cultivator which I will sell at a bargain.

Mr. Geo. J. Hurt, who is located in the Soldiers Home, Dayton, Ohio, and who was here last week, stated that at this time there were only about 3,500 old veterans in the home, as many were off, spending their vacation. When they are all in the number that are entertained is between five and six thousand. He says it is a splendidly managed institution and that the soldiers have all the comforts of life, and that he is perfectly satisfied.

Take Notice.

All persons having claims against the estate of Robert T. Pike, will present them, properly proven, between now and the first of October, 1919.

J. H. Pike, Admr.

Mr. D. P. Weeks, of Tampa, Fla., is here. He recently leased a large number of acres in this county, and he stated that he was making preparations to begin drilling for oil at an early day.

Prof. F. A. Strange and Miss Dora Eubank took the State examination last week. Their papers were sent to Frankfort, to be graded, no doubt but they will pass.

The Burdette mule sale in Edmonton, last Saturday, was a success. He said 26 head at from $200 to $410 a pair. John B. Coffey was with Mr. Burdette.

COL. WILLIAM CASEY, MRS JANE
OR JENNIE CASEY, AND JUDGE
ROBERT TODD.

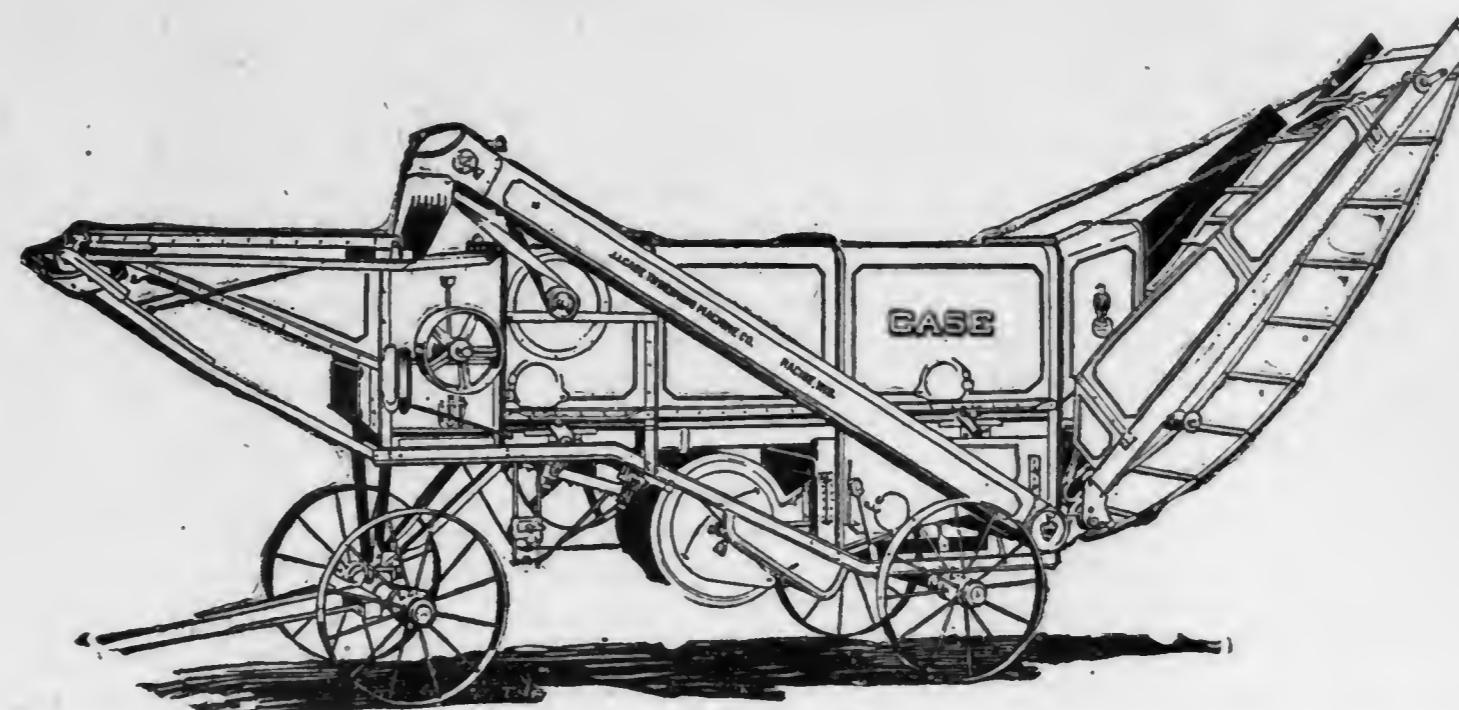

Another circumstance in the eventful life of Col. Wm. Casey, has been faithfully preserved by tradition, though it has never found its way into the writings of any historian of the period since. During one of the years, which Casey spent in Lincoln County, the incursions of the Indians were so frequent and fierce, that all of the persons, who had ventured to build houses and to reside without the forts and stockades, were compelled to abandon their holdings and to remove to the forts and strongly defended places for safety. One of these temporarily abandoned places, was a cabin with a small acreage of improved land surrounding it, which had been sown to flax. The pioneers of this state, of that day, were situated at such a distance from any civilized communities, where clothing could be procured, and separated from the nearest inhabited places by ranges of mountains, which were covered with a wilderness and inhabited by nothing except wild beasts and wild men. They were forced to rely upon themselves for supplies of every kind, and a crop of flax, out of which clothing, ropes and other necessities could be made, was a thing of too much importance to be allowed to go to waste. When the flax crop was ready to be saved, Casey headed a party of men and women, who went out for the purpose of harvesting the flax. When they arrived at the cabin, a number of men were placed upon each side of the field as sentinels and to guard the flax pullers against any sudden onset of the Indians. The others proceeded to "pull" the flax. This was affected by pulling the flax stalks from the ground with the hands, and laying them in rows, in small bundles. Casey and Robert Herald were two of the men, who, with the assistance of the women, were engaged in "pulling" the flax. A band of about fifteen Indians adroitly succeeded in getting between the sentinels and flax "pullers," unobserved, and then, with a sudden whoop, descended upon the latter. All were terrorized and panic stricken by the suddenness and unexpectedness of the attack and apparent enormity of the danger. The sentinels, taken, as they believed, in the rear, precipitately fled. The men, who were engaged in "pulling" the flax, taken at so great a disadvantage, believed there was no chance of escape from death, except in an immediate flight. At the first, Casey's heart quailed, and, alike the others, he started to run away. The cries of the women and children, however, fell upon his ears and arrested him. To him, it seemed better to die in defense of these helpless ones, than it was to live with the memory of having abandoned them to the cruel fate, which necessarily awaited them. He returned to the women and children and endeavored to get them started again, in the direction of Logan's Fort. At the first, this appeared to be hopeless, as they were greatly excited, overcome with fear, and stricken with terror, so much so that several of the women were jumping up and down, screaming and making no progress. Evidently, the Indians thought to capture all of the women and forbore to fire upon them. One warrior rushed forward and seized Mrs. Fletcher, who was one of the hysterical ones, by the hair, when Casey, who feared to discharge his rifle, because he would then be set upon and slain before he could reload, dealt the Indian such a heavy blow with the barrel of his rifle, that the skull of the Indian was crushed, and he sank to rise no more. With that judgment and forethought, which never failed him upon occasions of extreme peril, Casey had already realized, that alone he would make a hopeless fight, because, when his gun should be discharged, the Indians would rush upon him before he could reload, and he would have no chance for his life in a hand to hand combat, with knife and tomahawk against so many adversaries. Concealed behind a tree from the rifle fire of the Indians, he strenuously exhorted the women to proceed with all dispatch, while the Indians were afraid to rush forward, as they knew, it would be death to one or more of their number before they could slay Casey, and they were maneuvering to kill Casey and capture all the women without exposing themselves to, too much danger. Casey believed that there was one among those, who had precipitately fled, who would return and assist him, if he could make him to hear his call. That one was Robert Herald. So while maneuvering to get the women started towards Logan's Fort, and to keep the Indians temporarily at bay, he called at the top of his voice for Herald to return, addressing him by name. Luckily, Herald heard the despairing call, and, at once, returned to the scene. In after years, Casey said, that when Herald returned, he appeared to be cool and composed, but had an expression on his face, which clearly indicated, that in his opinion, that he had returned to die, but had made up his mind to sell his life, as dearly as possible. Herald calmly requested Casey to tell him what he would have him to do. Casey directed him to take the cover of a tree, about twenty yards to his (Casey's) right hand, and not to discharge his gun when his (Casey's) was unloaded, however, great the temptation, and together they would cover the retreat of the women and children, as long as they should escape being slain. By this time, the women had become more composed and were moving rapidly toward the fort. The Indians now attacked fiercely, but as often as one would expose himself, Casey or Herald, with unerring aim, would bring him down. The Indians observed, that when Herald or Casey would discharge his gun, that the other would hold his fire, and they were, thus deterred from making a charge. As opportunity offered, Casey and Herald would retreat, so as to prevent their being flanked, and at the same time, kept themselves well under cover. Through the use of these tactics, they were enabled to retreat to the fort. The women and children arrived at the fort safely, in advance of their defenders. Casey expressed the opinion, that he had returned to die, but had made up his mind to sell his life, as dearly as possible. Herald calmly requested Casey to tell him what he would have him to do. SYNOPSIS.

CHAPTER I—Senor don Antonio de la Guerra, wealthy Spanish ranch owner on the American side of the Mexican border, informed by his American attorney that a technical error has been found in his will. The senor signs a new document without reading it.

CHAPTER II—Teresa, only grandchild of the senor, finds evidence of a struggle in the library and her grandfather missing. The belief is that the senor has been carried off by rebels, border bandits. Billy Stanway, Teresa's sweetheart, takes command of the situation and orders the servants and vaqueros to arm themselves.

CHAPTER III—Stanway, with twenty men, starts in pursuit of the rebels. They meet Eduardo Ramon Torre, kinsman of Teresa, who has been wounded, he claims, by the escaping rebels.

CHAPTER IV—Stanway loses the rebels and reaches the hacienda. Teresa shows him the copy of the new will which she has found and which leaves all the property to Torre.

CHAPTER V—An emissary from the rebels arrives with the news that the senor is well and is being held for $20,000 ransom. Torre tries to assume authority at the hacienda, but Stanway takes command of the situation.

CHAPTER VI—Dempston, the senor's lawyer, is brought to the hacienda at Stanway's order and is accused of having received pay from Torre for altering the senor's will.

CHAPTER VII—Torre, who has been detained under guard by Stanway, admits that he is responsible for the senor's disappearance. He demands $20,000 to release all claim to the estate and to return the senor unharmed. Refusal will mean the senor's death within 24 hours.

He saw that if Torre had made one mistake—if Dempston were in reality what he appeared, a weak tool—yet the young Spaniard had planned painstakingly elsewhere.

"You may mark a certain seeming discrepancy," went on the Spaniard. "I suppose the De la Guerra estate is worth a million. And I am asking only twenty thousand dollars to renounce all claim, free the old gentleman, go away and leave you, senor, to pay your court to the heiress!"

He laughed softly at Stanway's quick, angry frown, and continued swiftly:

"It is because I have very urgent need of ten thousand dollars. It would save me from an embarrassing position, senor. You do not guess how embarrassing. And I am very modestly asking merely twice my actual needs."

"True, there is more to gain by slitting the throat of my esteemed kinsman and inheriting the whole. You see, I don't mind speaking frankly, between friends.

"But, on the other hand, the danger of which you speak would be much greater—and I need the money now, not after the courts can have had time to haggle over the will for a year or two. So, senor, you have my offer. What do you say?"

"I say," cried Stanway hotly, "that you are a scoundrel, and I believe only so much of what you say as I judge wise. If Senor de la Guerra dies, why then you go to the hangman—provided Gaucho and his men allow you to go that far. You will save him to save your own neck. Do you absolutely refuse to accept my proposition?"

"Absolutely. I shall make better terms."

Stanway went to the door.

"There is going to be no more making of terms," he said briefly. "I shall talk to you henceforward as I'd talk to a rat in a trap!"

Torre sprang up swiftly, his face flushing darkly with a rush of angry blood.

"You shall see," he cried harshly, "that even a rat in a trap may have sharp teeth. You fool, it is I who will offer terms—or dictate—at my pleasure!"

He turned away with a short, ugly laugh. Stanway for the first time felt a little shock of positive dread; fear that he was risking too much; that he had no right to assume this responsibility. For there was something in Torre's voice which told him that the man was making no idle threat.

CHAPTER VIII.

At Three O'clock.

The questions perplexing Stanway were these: "Is there a large force of men backing Torre and Juarez? Are they alone in the thing?" And there was only one way to answer them.

As the afternoon slipped by and dusk came down upon them, sweet and warm, through the groves of orange and olive trees, Teresa sent word to the men's quarters for all, excepting a half dozen of them, to come to the house.

Those not coming in were to remain on guard over the corrals into which the saddle-horses had been herded, and to serve as sentinels along the border. The guard over Torre and Juarez was doubled; the two men were disarmed and assigned to couches upon the opposite side of the drawing-room.

Doors were fastened, windows locked, shutters drawn, and the hacienda was like an old fortress in time of siege.

"I do not anticipate an attack," Stanway smiled into Teresa's grave face. "Surely the insurgents are not looking for complications with this country. But we are taking no chances. It would take a whole regiment of them to trouble us here tonight."

"But are we doing right?" she whispered a little fearfully. "If we gave them the money—it is so small a part of papa grande's estate—he would be out of all danger. And as it is—"

"It is a bluff of Torre's, pure and simple," he told her. "If anything should happen to Senor de la Guerra, Torre and Juarez would not last fifteen minutes with your little army of retainers, señorita. They talk big, both of them, but I am not afraid."

But when she had given him her hand and a wan smile by the way of "Buenas noches," he was not content until he himself had seen to the watchfulness of the men stationed here and there throughout the big house. And, by the way of final precaution, he saw that another man slept that night at Pedro's side, in front of the señorita's door, and that both men were armed.

He had not again gone to where Dempston fumed and worried in the library. It was his thought to leave the lawyer to chew upon the cud of suspicion his own parting words had given him, to make the night long and uneventful for him, so that his trembling little soul might have time for thought.

It was late when Teresa heeded his urging and went to her room. He left her at the foot of the stairs leading up to her chambers; saw Pedro preparing to spend the night at her doorway, and then went to his own room, decided to sleep until the stiller hours of the night came; then to superintend in person the watch which was being kept throughout the house.

On his way to the wing of the building which had been given over to him, he passed through the drawing-room for the last time.

Juarez seemed to be asleep upon his couch. Half a dozen of Gaucho's vaqueros, all armed, were scattered about the room, their quick eyes showing how alert was the spirit within them. Torre, sitting at a table idly turning the leaves of an illustrated book of poems, rose quickly when Stanway came into the room and stepped to his side.

"A word is in your ear, señor," he said, his voice and manner gayly impulsive.

"You may mark a certain seeming discrepancy," went on the Spaniard. "I suppose the De la Guerra estate is worth a million. And I am asking only twenty thousand dollars to renounce all claim, free the old gentleman, go away and leave you, senor, to pay your court to the heiress!"

He saw that if Torre had made one mistake—if Dempston were in reality what he appeared, a weak tool—yet the young Spaniard had planned painstakingly elsewhere.

"You may mark a certain seeming discrepancy," went on the Spaniard. "I suppose the De la Guerra estate is worth a million. And I am asking only twenty thousand dollars to renounce all claim, free the old gentleman, go away and leave you, senor, to pay your court to the heiress!"

"It is because I have very urgent need of ten thousand dollars. It would save me from an embarrassing position, senor. You do not guess how embarrassing. And I am very modestly asking merely twice my actual needs."

"True, there is more to gain by slitting the throat of my esteemed kinsman and inheriting the whole. You see, I don't mind speaking frankly, between friends.

"But, on the other hand, the danger of which you speak would be much greater—and I need the money now, not after the courts can have had time to haggle over the will for a year or two. So, senor, you have my offer. What do you say?"

"I say," cried Stanway hotly, "that you are a scoundrel, and I believe only so much of what you say as I judge wise. If Senor de la Guerra dies, why then you go to the hangman—provided Gaucho and his men allow you to go that far. You will save him to save your own neck. Do you absolutely refuse to accept my proposition?"

"Absolutely. I shall make better terms."

Stanway went to the door.

"There is going to be no more making of terms," he said briefly. "I shall talk to you henceforward as I'd talk to a rat in a trap!"

Torre sprang up swiftly, his face flushing darkly with a rush of angry blood.

"You shall see," he cried harshly, "that even a rat in a trap may have sharp teeth. You fool, it is I who will offer terms—or dictate—at my pleasure!"

He turned away with a short, ugly laugh. Stanway for the first time felt a little shock of positive dread; fear that he was risking too much; that he had no right to assume this responsibility. For there was something in Torre's voice which told him that the man was making no idle threat.

CHAPTER VIII.

At Three O'clock.

The questions perplexing Stanway were these: "Is there a large force of men backing Torre and Juarez? Are they alone in the thing?" And there was only one way to answer them.

As the afternoon slipped by and dusk came down upon them, sweet and warm, through the groves of orange and olive trees, Teresa sent word to the men's quarters for all, excepting a half dozen of them, to come to the house.

Those not coming in were to remain on guard over the corrals into which the saddle-horses had been herded, and to serve as sentinels along the border. The guard over Torre and Juarez was doubled; the two men were disarmed and assigned to couches upon the opposite side of the drawing-room.

Doors were fastened, windows locked, shutters drawn, and the hacienda was like an old fortress in time of siege.

"Si, señor."

Lugo chuckled his approval, and hurried away through the still house. Stanway lay back upon his bed and closed his eyes, only to open them quickly to stare into the darkness of his room.

He was remembering those forebodings which had come to him with Torre's veiled threats; he was feeling an uneasiness which he could not drive out. Torre had sent for him in the middle of the night—

Again he sat up, groping for matches and a candlestick. In the little yellow glow he saw that it lacked but ten minutes of three. He sprang out of bed, drew on his clothes hurriedly, and hastened to the drawing-room.

"Ah, señor, you are very kind." Torre's smile was full of mock-politeness. "To trouble yourself so at the lightest wish of a guest is—"

"Get down to business if you have any," Stanway interrupted bluntly. "What is it?"

"I want a word with you in private," Torre answered quietly. The man was fully dressed and now rose from the couch upon which he had been lying. "There is no objection to the others being in the room, but at least let us stand at the far side of the chamber so that they may not hear."

"If you have anything to say, say it aloud," Stanway retorted. "I am tired of your way of doing business, Torre. Now, what is it?"

Torre shrugged.

"Then I shall be silent," he said carelessly. "I think that you are making a mistake, señor."

Was he? Stanway didn't know. He looked about the room. Juarez seemed to be sleeping heavily upon his couch; the vaqueros, seven of them, sat along the walls or lounged about the room, each man of them as watchful, his eyes as keen and suspicious as at the beginning of their vigil at dusk.

And yet, in spite of all this security, in spite of the fact that Stanway and the De la Guerra servants were armed and their two prisoners unarmed, the rancher had the odd feeling that there was a weakness in his position which he could not see, but which was very plain to the smiling Torre. And then his curiosity decided him.

"Come," he said after a brief moment. "And then again: 'Now, what is it?'

He had stepped to the far corner of the room, motioning two of the lounging cowboys out of earshot. Torre, debonair, his manner gracefully indifferent, stopped at the big mahogany table to light his cigarette at one of the candles and came to Stanway's side.

"Thank you, señor," he said, his voice very low now, his words guarded so that, none but the rancher might hear them. "For this is in the way of a kindness to me, although you do not know that yet."

"It is not meant that way, so keep your thanks," returned Stanway. "I am waiting."

"Bueno. Now first I want you to remember this: I am in the position to be the key to the situation, and you must see that. If for any reason the vaqueros in some sudden fit of rage should seek to put a violent end to my gay little existence—" He shrugged. "It would be like a man in a prison cell destroying the key to his liberty, señor."

"Go on. Needless to say I don't understand."

"You will in a moment." He glanced at his watch. "It is almost three. This you must understand: if such a thought should come into the vaqueros' bloody minds I shall look to you as my protector."

"Now"—his air, his smile, his very carriage eloquent of a laughing impudence, he stepped close to the shuttered window—"now something is going to happen."

Suddenly his hand shot out and a pane fell from the window, broken into many pieces, tinkling upon the carpet. Torre put his face to the opening he had so rudely made and called out sharply, aloud:

"Ahora, compañeros! Strike!"

A revolver flashed into sight in Stanway's hand; a revolver was in the hand of each vaquero in the room. The air was charged with expectancy.

"Watch him!" called out Stanway. "Jerk him back from the window!"

While he was speaking he had struck one of the candlesticks from the table; Gaucho had understood and had put out the other lights. The room sank into swift, impenetrable darkness.

Three of the cowboys had thrown themselves upon Torre, dragging him back, holding his arms pinioned at his sides. Stanway, with no minute lost, threw open the shutters, raised the window and peered out into the night.

It was very still. He could see little enough, but his straining eyes ran back and forth along the wall of the house and were certain that there were no lurking forms there. His ears told him of the heavy breathing of the men behind him, but brought him no sound of men without.

"Remember, señor," called Torre, his panting voice telling of the treatment he was being accorded by men who hungered to take justice into their own hands. "Remember about the key!"

Stanway closed the window and the shutters, calling to Gaucho for a light. The flicker of the match showed him Torre in the grip of the three men, his face looking a little pale, his eyes very bright.

"If he has his nerve," muttered Stanway. "Tell him to be more explicit or to go to the devil."

given the signal. Remember he is not to go free."

Fierce fires leaped up in the savage eyes of the vaqueros, and the big, brown, muscular hands corded ominously.

A clock somewhere in the house struck—one, two, three. Stanway counted, every sense on the alert, his mind expecting, his heart dreading he knew not what.

And then came the thing he had not looked for.

It was a scream—a woman's scream, rising sharp through the sudden silence, telling of sudden, rude awakening, of blind, gripping terror. "The señorita!" shouted Gaucho. "Madre de Dlos! They are killing the señorita!"

CHAPTER IX.

The Key.

Stanway had already recognized the voice coming to them faintly from the far eastern end of the building; a great fear for Teresa had already leaped out upon him, and he had flung open the door, running toward her rooms.

"Remember!" shouted Torre after him, "if I die—"

"Gaucho, Esteban, come with me!" called Stanway, his voice cutting through Torre's swift words. "The rest of you stay with your prisoners. Do not harm them—until I come back. They alone can help us save your master and mistress. But if they try to escape then shoot them like dogs!"

And he was gone, running swiftly through the long hall, his words floating back across his shoulder, the heavy boots of Gaucho and Esteban pounding just behind him.

Door after door he flung open as he raced on through the darkness, waiting for no candle. He came at last to the broad stairway leading up to Teresa's rooms, Gaucho and Esteban at his heels.

Here there was light, a candle burning low upon the floor at the side of Pedro's couch. And Pedro—

"They have killed him!" It was Gaucho's voice in a little expressionless grunt.

Pedro lay upon the floor at the side of his couch, his body half covered with the blankets which had fallen with him, his face very white, a smear of blood across temple and cheek. Celestino, the vaquero who had spent the night at Pedro's side, was not to be seen.

Stanway, rushing up the stairs, his revolver in his hand, bestowed only one look upon the unconscious Pedro and rushed at the door of Teresa's room.

The door was locked. He called. There was no answer. Everything was perfectly still. He knocked at the door loudly, calling again. And now, when silence answered him, a great fury swept through him, his brain seemed to be on fire, his voice seemed to him to come from a great distance as he shouted for an ax.

The ax came, but he had not waited for it. A heavy chair had splintered against the oak panels, but the panels themselves were no obstacle to the fury of his attack. They burst at last, his hand found the key in the lock upon the other side of the door, the door was flung open.

Nothing, nothing but emptiness and a wild disorder which told, had needed the telling, of the girl's abduction!

"Horses," he shouted. "Gaucho

PEACE TREATY SIGNED.

The news of the signing of the peace treaty by Germany, last Saturday afternoon, was in a few minutes after the signatures of all concerned were placed to the document, flashed over the United States. Simultaneously upon receiving the glad news the bells and whistles in all the large cities commenced to make noise, and singing and jollifying was kept up for quite awhile. The signing of this document forever bars another world war, and in a short time friendly trading relations will be resumed by all countries. Peace on earth, good will to men, is the sentiment that should be proclaimed by all former belligerent nations. Soon after the signing of this document President Wilson issued a proclamation from the White House, announcing that it would be impossible for him to intervene and stop the application of the war dry act until after all the United States soldiers had been demobilized. A country at peace and a ban on the booze, what is to hinder happiness among the children of men?

Hon. M. Ray Yarberry, who is a native of Columbia, but who has been living in Louisville for seven or eight years, has created a stir among the Republicans of his city. Mr. Yarberry was a Republican candidate for the State Senate, in the Twenty-third district, composed of the Eleventh and Twelfth Wards. John J. Jacobs has been repulsive to Mr. Yarberry for some time, and he has been fighting Jacob's application to become Meat Inspector. Notwithstanding his opposition, Mayor Smith made the appointment. Yarberry immediately withdrew from the race for State Senator, and announced that he would fight against the City Administration's candidates for Aldermen this fall. He said he could not stomach Mayor Smith's action, but he would support the State and county Republican candidates. Mr. Yarberry has quite a following in Louisville and his fight, just started, to repudiate Mayor Smith's action, will cut a lot of ice.

Recalling the happenings of 1912, when they "fought, bled and died" for the purification of the G. O. P., the progressive Republicans must feel like climbing up on their feet and emitting three rousing cheers every time they reflect on the leadership of Penrose, Lodge and Smoot in the Senate and Mondell in the House. At the Chicago Republican convention in 1912, Representative Mondell declared that it "acted honestly and in a spirit of fairness, in harmony with party history, for the best interests of the party and the American people."

King Albert, of Belgium, is in the hearts of the American people. When he and his wife, Queen Elizabeth, visits this country, in September, they will be greeted by all dignitaries who can get in reach of them.

The sensational white slave charge against Jewell C. Preston, Glasgow, was dismissed in the Federal Court, Louisville, last Thursday. Ruby Richards was the girl, and her family asked that the charge be dismissed.

All citizens of the Eighth Congressional District who are interested in having an able representative in Congress, should make up their minds to be at the polls on the 2nd day of August and vote for Judge C. A. Hardin, of Mercer county.

German recalcitrance toward the peace terms followed Republican opposition to the League of Nations and the Senatorial attack on President Wilson. These things may not have had the relation, but they certainly were in the order, of cause and effect.

Chairman Hays of the Republican National Committee delivers a speech to tell the public his party will not make League of Nations a partisan issue. Why doesn't he write a few personal and confidential letters to the Senatorial "Robins" to notify them?

Messrs. John R. Thomas and Charles L. Hunter, who have edited and published the Lebanon Falcon for the past eleven years, sold the entire outfit and business to Mr. D. B. Spragens and the latter takes charge to-day. The former publishers will be missed from the fraternity, as they got out a very readable paper, and the new owner will be given a hearty welcome.

The Democrats of this county are again reminded that Judge C. A. Hardin, of Mercer county, is the party's nominee for Congress in this district, and that it is very important that he receive a full vote on Saturday the 2nd day of August. This election comes on the same day of the general primary, but the voting will take place in different booths.

Some reactionary Republican Senators would have us—and all the world besides—believe that the only interest this country has in foreign nations is interest on American investments. And still they seem to forget that peace must precede prosperity, here and abroad; that we can not recover our trade with Europe until, with our help, Europe has re-established peaceful, permanent governments.

A Warning.

Employers of children are warned that a violation of the recently enacted Federal Revenue Act (section 1203-a) entails a fine of 10 per cent. of the year's profits of firm or corporation found guilty.

The Act forbids the employing any child under 14 years of age in any mill, cannery, work shop, factory or manufacturing establishment or the employing of any child under 16 years of age in a mine or quarry.

It also forbids the employing of children between 14 and 16 years of age for more than 8 hours in any one day or more than 6 days in any one week.

The Kentucky Child Labor Law (section 331—a Kentucky Statute) forbids the employing, at any time of the year, of children 14 years of age in any factory, mill, workshop, merchantile establishment, store, office, printing establishment, bakery, laundry, restaurant, hotel, apartment house, theatre, motion picture establishment, or in the distribution or transmission of merchandise or messages.

It forbids the employing, at any time of the year, of any child between 14 and 16 years of age in any factory, mill, workshop, merchantile establishment, store, office, printing establishment, bakery, laundry, restaurant, hotel, apartment house, theatre, motion picture establishment, or in the distribution or transmission of merchandise or messages, unless said child secures a working permanent.

It forbids the employing, at any time of the year, in any of the above occupations of any child for more than 8 hours in any one day; before 7 a.m. or after 6 p.m. in any one day; more than 48 hours in any one week or more than 6 days in any one week.

Unguarded machinery of any dangerous description is a violation of the Law and voids insurance on any employee who is under twenty-one years of age. (See sub-section 10, Kentucky Child Labor Law.)

The penalty for violating any section of Kentucky Child Labor Law entails fine of $15 to $50 for first offense.

A violation of either Federal or State Child Labor Law Acts not only renders employers liable to fines under both Federal and State Laws but voids the employers' protective insurance or Workman's Compensation Act in the event of injury to one thus illegally employed.

Interested in Film Productions to Be Made at Methodist Celebration at Columbus, O.

DR. JAMES E. CROWTHER AND D. W. GRIFFITH.

The support of the motion picture world as represented by D. W. Griffith, well known film producer, was assured the Methodist Centenary Celebration at a conference in Columbus, the celebration being represented by Dr. S. Earl Taylor of New York, Dr. J. E. Crowther of Seattle, Dr. Fred Fisher of New York and Dr. C. F. Reisner of New York.

Mr. Griffith, in addition to promising to make a film of all important features of the Centenary Celebration, strongly urged the use of motion pictures in the advancement of religious work. He spoke strongly of the possibilities of the motion pictures under proper supervision being made to carry a religious message further than any known form of communication.

Dr. S. Earl Taylor, director general of the Centenary Celebration, made the statement that "we want pictures that talk the universal language. I believe the message of peace and good will should be preached to the world through pictures."

"I am glad to know they are going to give motion pictures a practical demonstration at the Centenary Celebration," said Mr. Griffith. "The celebration will give the people in towns and villages a wonderful opportunity to visit the entire world by going no further than Columbus. There will be an extraordinary impression produced by seeing these villages of China, Japan and India, not peopled by amateurish actors, but inhabited by real natives from foreign lands.

"I have been astounded beyond measure at the breadth, extent and scope of the entire scheme as it has been revealed to me by Dr. Taylor, Dr. Crowther, Dr. Reisner and others. I understand the Methodist Church has $140,000,000 and is going to celebrate its success with something more nearly resembling a world fair than anything else to which it can be compared. One would think that a great nation at least is behind the movement. Doubtless, something greater than the greatest nation is behind it—a reawakened ideal and faith inspired to bind up the wounds of a torn and outraged world."

Columbus Can Well Accommodate All Who Attend Methodist Celebration. Officials Say

NO CROWD which has been proposed for the Methodist Centenary Celebration will swamp Columbus, according to Mayor George J. Karb, who has received some inquiries from distant points regarding the ability of the Capital City to take care of the hundreds of thousands of Methodists coming from all over the United States for the Centenary Celebration, June 20 to July 13.

Mayor Karb says: "Columbus has always been equal to any situation. We are not going to fail the exposition crowds, no matter how many thousand there are. Tell them to come to Columbus town. We are ready with open hearts and open doors. Columbus can do it."

James T. Daniels, secretary of the Chamber of Commerce, says: "We can easily and satisfactorily accommodate three hundred thousand visitors." Organizing Secretary H. B. Dickson says: "Three hundred thousand my minimum estimate of attendance. Confidence Columbus can take care of twice that number."

NO SEATS RESERVED

First Come, First Served, at Coliseum at Methodist Centenary

At a conference of Director General S. Earl Taylor, Dr. Fred B. Fisher, H. B. Dickson and other members of the Centenary Exposition staff, it was decided that there will be no seats reserved in the Coliseum for "The Wayfarer" pageant presentations at the Methodist Centenary Celebration, Columbus, O., June 20-July 13.

All seats will be available to spectators as soon as the doors of the Coliseum are opened each evening. "It will be a case of 'first come, first served,'" says Mr. Dickson. Season tickets to the exposition grounds admit the bearer once to the pageant in the Coliseum. Single admission fees at the gate require an additional fifty cents for the Coliseum evening feature.

Helmets Worn by German War Lords on Exhibit at Methodist Centenary Celebration

THREE helmets, absolutely guaranteed to have been worn by the former Kaiser William of Germany, Von Bethmann-Hellweg and General Ludendorff, will be on exhibition in Columbus, O., as a part of the Methodist Centenary Celebration, June 20 to July 13. They were brought out of Germany during the revolution by Lowell Thomas, world traveler and explorer, whose travoloes will be given in Columbus as a feature of the celebration.

Thomas entered Germany at this most critical period, without pass-

You can rely on Cardui. Surely it will do for you what it has done for so many thousands of other women! It should help.

"I was taken sick, seemed to be . . .," writes Mrs. Mary E. Veste, of Madison Heights, Va. "I got down so weak, could hardly walk . . . just staggered around. . . . I read of Cardui, and after taking one bottle, or before taking quite all, I felt much better. I took 3 or 4 bottles at that time, and was able to do my work. I take it in the spring when rundown. I had no appetite, and I commenced eating. It is the best tonic I ever saw." Try Cardui.

METHODISTS SHOULD GATHER NEW ZEAL

Centenary an Inspiration Says Dr. Fisher.

Dr. Fred Fisher of New York, who has been assistant executive secretary of the Methodist Centenary drive, has turned his entire organization to the job of mobilizing Methodism in Columbus, June 20 to July 13.

In outlining the campaign he has placed before 78,000 committeemen of the Methodist Church, he says: "We must stress four things. First, this will be a big Victory Celebration. The Methodists of the United States have lived more in the past year than in any 10 previous years of their existence. Now is the time for them to get together and celebrate their victory."

"In the second place, this is an opportunity for Methodists to have visualized the scenes and activities of which they have been talking for the past year, but of which they have no personal knowledge. Of these 78,000 men, only a negligible per cent has ever had the opportunity of going abroad. At the celebration they can get the trip around the world at their convenience."

"Third, this is the time to 'finish the job,' to gather inspiration and information to enable the organized workers in the church to carry out the program which has been mapped out for the next four years.

"Fourth, and most important of all, if the Celebration realizes the ideals which those who are back of it hold, it must be the inspiration for planning work for the next century. As we look upon the marvels that have been accomplished we should gather new faith and new zeal for enterprises that can be measured only in terms of another century. We must in a word, weld ourselves together in a great spiritual purpose to strike the bell's eve."

Dr. Fisher indicated that 150 trained executives in a relation to the 78,000 volunteer workers, will stimulate interest in the Centenary Celebration during the next six weeks.

Leading Lady in 'The Wayfarer' at Methodist Centenary Celebration

MME. BLANCHE YURKA creates the role of Understanding, leading female part in "The Wayfarer" pageant, which will be presented at the Methodist Centenary celebration in Columbus, O., June 20 to July 13. Henry Herbert, English Shakespearean interpreter, will have the other leading role.

Nearly 1,000 costumed characters will appear in the majestic religious pageant which will be presented every evening during the celebration in the Coliseum at the exposition grounds. The Coliseum boasts of the largest stage in America and seats 8,000 persons. A seated chorus of 1,000 trained voices will augment the effectiveness of the pageant.

Soloist in "The Wayfarer" at Methodist Celebration

MISS HELEN NEWITT, dramatic lyric soprano, will be the soprano soloist in "The Wayfarer," the great religious pageant which will be presented as part of the Methodist Centenary celebration in Columbus, O., June 20 to July 13. Henry Herbert, English Shakespearean interpreter, and Mme. Blanche Yurka, will have the leading speaking parts. Viola Ellis, contralto, will be a soloist.

The pageant will be presented on the largest stage in America, in the Coliseum of the exposition grounds, which seats 8,000 persons. Nearly 1,000 costumed characters and a seated chorus of 1,000 trained voices will appear in the pageant.

JULY 7 NEGRO DAY

Trips Planned For Visitors to Methodist Centenary.

Negro Methodists, in Columbus as Centenary Celebration visitors, will make a pilgrimage to Upper Sandusky, birthplace of the Home Missionary movement, to honor the memory of its founder, John Stewart, a man of their own race. The trip is scheduled for Saturday July 5.

Other trips planned include a visit to the grave of Ben Hanby, author of "Nellie Gray," in Otterbein cemetery; to Ohio Wesleyan University, Delaware; perhaps in smaller numbers to Wilberforce, and possible to Oberlin, where so many found, by underground route, safe haven in Civil war days.

Monday, July 7, has been designated officially as "Negro Day," and will be observed at the Centenary Celebration grounds with an elaborate program of pageantry, addresses, special music and parades. For this occasion, Dr. W. E. Dubois, editor of The Crisis, published in New York, has written a pageant, "The Star of Ethiopia," which will be produced in the Coliseum by colored participants. The theme of the pageant is the evolution of the race traced through progressive stages of achievement to the present day. A chorus of 500 voices, all Negroes, will present the pageant music.

THE TAX LAWS

Chief Justice Carroll's Proposed Amendment—An Increase In Revenue and No Increase In Taxes

Chief Justice John D. Carroll's plan of taxation is to exempt lands and town lots from all state taxes. Counties will not be required to assume any obligation now taken care of by the state. The state will have as much or more money as it now has and will use it for the same purpose that it is now used.

$3,500,000 will be taken off of real estate and $4,500,000 will be collected annually by the state in the place of it from other sources, as follows:

- Franchise tax-paying corporations, banks and trust companies, will pay all taxes except for graded schools and municipalities to the state, but the total taxes paid on this property shall be not more than is now paid. The additional revenue from this source will be not less than $2,000,000.
- All intangible personal property will be assessed. Not less than $1,000,000 additional will be collected from this source.
- The state will save more than $200,000 which is now paid for assessing and collecting taxes on real estate.

- An adequate system for collecting inheritance taxes will enable the state to collect not less than $400,000 additional.

- By a revision of the license tax laws, more than $300,000 additional can be collected.

- Elimination of useless expenses for salaries and other purposes, will save the state not less than $500,000.

Great Lecturers a Feature Of This Year's Chautauqua

HON. EDMUND H. HINSHAW

DR. CYRUS S. NUSBAUM

A. H. HARNLEY

JEANNETTE KLING

Is yours a mind that thrills and is inspired when the mastery of matchless thoughts is matched with the witchery of golden words?

Then you will respond with fervor to the glowing message of this year's Chautauqua lecturers—for surely never was such a galaxy of great thinkers and gifted speakers presented in a single week!

Because of his position in the body politic, and by reason of the widespread and universal appreciation of his gifts as an orator, chief attention is being focused on the great lecture on "Peace and Its Problems," to be delivered by Hon. Edmund H. Hinshaw. Mr. Hinshaw in his characteristically magnetic manner cuts with the white heat of an acetylene torch to the very heart of many of our national problems and points the way to success in the delicate after-the-war period.

Another lecturer of more than ordinary interest—as well as more than ordinary eloquence is Dr. Cyrus S. Nusbaum. Even before the war he was a great drawing card—and crowds flocked to hear him—but now that he returns from his self-sacrificing war-time service with the Red Cross there is even more than the usual interest in him.

Dr. Nusbaum is devoting himself to the question of community efficiency—long a specialty of his—and will help to show our own community the way to better things.

The third of the eloquent lecturers booked for Chautauqua week is A. H. Harnley—a man of gifted and golden words. His lecture on "Parasites" is a stirring arraignment of those vampires of modern civilization that demand so much from the life of a community without adding anything to it. Dr. Harnley's division of humanity into lifters and leaners, trolleys and trailers is decidedly interesting. And his presentation of it is a masterpiece.

A big educational feature of the opening day is found in the talented presentation of Tarkington's great play "The Country Cousin" with Jeannette Kling reading all the parts.

Seldom, indeed, has a single Chautauqua program offered lecturers as appealing as these.

$1,000,000 LIBEL CASE IN 8TH WEEK

HENRY FORD—CHICAGO TRIBUNE CASE STILL HOLDS THE ATTENTION OF COURT.

FORD CALLED "ANARCHIST"

Soldiers Testify That The Ford Co., Held Places Open For Them And Helped Families.

The Case to Date

The Chicago Tribune in an editorial printed June 23, 1916, declared "Henry Ford is An Anarchist." It followed this with the charge that Mr. Ford would not hold jobs open for the men in his employ who were called to the Mexican border, nor would he assist any of their dependents who might be in need.

Mr. Ford brought suit for libel against the Tribune for the sum of $1,000,000 and the case, after many legal battles, was brought to trial in Mt. Clemens, Mich.

In an effort to justify the printed statement, The Tribune has summoned a large number of witnesses from the Mexican border to testify to the state of unrest which prevailed at the time The Tribune was calling for armed intervention and Mr. Ford was counselling gentler methods.

Mr. Ford, in presenting his case, summoned a large number of employees who left the Ford Motor Company to serve on the border and overseas. All of these men testified that their jobs were waiting for them when they returned. Wives of the men also took the stand and testified that they had received regular financial assistance from the Ford Motor Co. while their husbands were in the service.

Mt. Clemens, Mich.—In its sixth week and rapidly approaching its seventh, the Henry Ford—Chicago Tribune $1,000,000 libel case promises to break all records for legal battles of this kind.

When attorneys for Mr. Ford closed their case, after occupying a full week with the testimony of soldiers and their dependents, the defense opened by calling witnesses from Texas and proceeded to re-create for the benefit of the jury, the situation which existed on the Mexican border at the time The Tribune called Mr. Ford an anarchist.

All of this testimony has been admitted by the court over the general objection of the plaintiff's attorneys who claim that the case should be confined to the "four corners of the editorial" and who declare further that The Tribune cannot find justification for calling Mr. Ford an anarchist in the mere fact that he is a pacifist.

Big Business Blamed.

One of the witnesses called by The Tribune has been Norman Walker, Associated Press bureau chief in El Paso, Texas. Mr. Walker thrilled the spectators at the trial with his personal story. He was captured by the Mexican Federal forces in 1911 and narrowly escaped being executed as a spy. During the course of cross-examination, Mr. Walker stated that he had heard representatives of American business interests in Mexico insist that armed intervention was the only way out of the trouble. This is one of the points at which Ford counsel is driving. One of their contentions is that The Tribune advocated intervention in Mexico because its owners and stockholders were interested in the Standard Oil and International Harvester concerns, both of which have large business interests in the country.

On the other hand, the Ford attorneys insist that the entire charge that The Tribune was pro-German is false.

United States entered the world war and that in advocating war with Mexico it was playing Germany's game.

The Tribune's witnesses are probably the most picturesque ever produced in a middle-western court case.

They wear their border garb of mole-skin clothes, high leather boots, high crowned velour or felt hats and most of them are heeled with beautiful pistols.

Ford to Take Stand.

The Tribune has announced that it will call both Henry Ford and his son Edsel Ford to the witness stand. It has also announced that, if the court permits, it will air the entire question of national preparedness to show that in his endeavors to promote peace, Mr. Ford became a dangerous enemy of America.

Counsel for the plaintiff, on the other hand, keeps nailing the jury's attention to the issue in the case, which is that The Tribune called Mr. Ford an anarchist. This was libel, they insist because, it is their contention, the charges on which the editorial was based—that men who entered the service of the nation would not be given employment when they returned and their families would be permitted to suffer want and privation while they were gone—were utterly and maliciously false.

HON. EDMUND H. HINSHAW A BIG FEATURE OF THE CHAUTAUQUA

"Peace and Its Problems"—It is a subject to conjure with—it is a question the depths of which none but a true statesman can plumb—it is a riddle that every real American is doing his best to read in these days of international reconstructing.

"Peace and Its Problems" is the title of a wonderfully eloquent lecture—to be delivered by the Hon. Edmund H. Hinshaw on the third day of the Chautauqua.

This gifted orator is a man of broad public service and great experience. For four years he was prosecuting attorney of Jefferson county, Nebraska, for four consecutive terms he represented that state in the national Congress. At all times he won for himself a reputation for straight thinking and masterly oratorical ability. His handling of the tremendous subject of "Peace and Its Problems" should be one of the strongest Chautauqua features our community has ever known.

My dear Mr. Whitehead:
I am very glad to learn that you have secured Dr. Cyrus S. Nusbaum for your Chautauqua Circuit during the coming summer. During the years I have known him it has been my privilege to listen to him upon a wide range of subjects. He is a man not only of broad intelligence and broad vision, but of great oratorical ability. He has been giving his energies to war work during the months we have been in the struggle and will be in a mood to give you a particularly timely message on the problems which have become a great inspiration in his life. —that of community development.
With best wishes for the success of his tour.
Yours sincerely,
